Is there anything else you would like to say regarding yourself and your experience with hand controls?

I like that portable controls can be taken off for service or another person to drive and also having them for a rental if nessacery.

Automobility are the best I've used (least destructive, best function.) I but still have still have issues. I just built my own.

It would be great to have semi permanent controls. Or more secure than portable.

I wish they weren't so jerky. It's really hard to accelerate or brake smoothly with hand controls. Maybe it's just me but I've heard from several other people that it's the same for them.

They were very easy to learn how to use.

Love portal controls because I can travel with them. But i get tired with that style. Push twist are uncomfortable too. I have used all types but not the electronic ones.

The colors portable controls are nice because they are affordable and I like to have
